German Socialists Not Satisfied With William's Promises

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Nov. 4.—German socialists are not satisfied with the promises of Emperor William, issued Sunday, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen. The Vorwarts says: "The manifesto was not a manifesto, it was a statement of the socialists' demand for abdication."

On the occasion of the constitutional amendment, Emperor William, Emperor Maximilian of Baden, the German imperial chancellor, a decree indemnifying the decisions of the Reichstag and allowing his firm determination to cooperate in their full development. The emperor's decree reads:

"I return herewith for immediate publication the bill to amend the imperial constitution and the law of March 17, 1879, relative to the representation of the imperial chancellor, which has been laid before me for signature."

"On the occasion of this step, which is so momentous for the future history of the German people, I have a desire to give expression to my feelings. Prepared for by a series of crises, a new order comes in to force which transfers the fundamental rights of the Kaiser's person to the people."

"Thus comes to a close a period which will stand in honor before the eyes of future generations. Despite all struggles between authority and aspiring forces, it has rendered possible to our people, that tremendous development, which imperishably endures in the wonderful achievements of this war."

"In the terrible storms of the four years of war, however, old forms have been broken up, but to make a place for a new, vital form."

"After the achievements of these four years, the German people can claim that no right which may guarantee a free and happy future shall be withheld from them."

"The proposals of the allied governments, which are now adopted and extended, owe their origin to the conviction that, even with these decisions of parliament in firm determination, as far as I am concerned, the German people will be able to achieve their full development, convinced that I am thereby promoting the well of the German people."

"The Kaiser's office is one of service to the people. May, then, the new order release all the good powers which our people need in order to support the last, but not least, the German people, with a firm step win a bright future from the gloom of the present."

Wilhelm, I. R. (Counter-signed)

"Max, Prince of Baden."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Macon, Nov. 4.—Every time the Rainbow division gets in to action a rainbow appears in the direction of the division's advance, according to Major Cooper D. Winn of Macon, commander of the One Hundred and Fifty-first Machine Gun Battalion.

"Speaking of the rainbow," the major says in a letter to Mrs. Winn: "I have a phenomenon which always appears in the shape of a beautiful rainbow when we go into a fight. It has not failed a single time since we have been in the line of the rainbow resting in the ground and its arch spanned the direction of our advance. We did not find the fabled bag of gold, but we did find a bag of Germans and much of their booty."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

British Army Under General Haig Have Captured 20,000 Prisoners. In New Assault on Hun Lines.

With the American Army North-west of Verdun, Nov. 4.—The American troops at 5 p. m., had advanced their left flank north of Auzin in close co-operation with the French forces which have been fighting their way eastward on the bend in the Aisne river. Further eastward, American forces were in action and their patrols were reported as far north as Brulles-sur-Bar.

Posses Taken

In the center of the line the village of Posse was pushed early in the day and then in quick succession Harcourt, Nouart, Le Champy Haute and Le Champy Bas were occupied by the Americans. The advance of General Pershing's troops has reached the little lake in the center of Belval wood. On the extreme right the Americans were north of Montigny Devant-Bassey. From there the line ran to the Meuse river.

Pursuing Enemy. It has not been a day of fighting as much as pursuit. The Germans are not retreating in great disorder and their withdrawal cannot be called a rout but it is certain that the general staff and the field officers have lost control to a certain extent.

All parts of the line were active during last night. The left wing continued its advance with little interruption, even after dark. The Americans resolved to push their way through the night. The right wing was active during the day and the left wing was active during the night.

There was a great deal of artillery firing and rear guard fighting at Harcourt and Nouart but it was quickly swept away. After cleaning up Tilly last night, the Americans took 20,000 prisoners and occupied Les Fontenelles farm.

Trying to Hold Men. From the left flank to the right the American troops are pushing their way through the night. The right wing was active during the day and the left wing was active during the night.

Paris.—The Germans maintained activity with their artillery and machine guns. The entire fifteen mile front along the Aisne, between Rethel and Semuy, according to today's war office report.

The French lost 10,000 men during the month of October in the fighting on the Aisne front, took 10,387 prisoners, 113 cannon and 1,500 machine guns, the statement announced.

London.—More than 20,000 prisoners and several hundred guns have been taken by the 48th British division operating on the Aisne front. The statement announced.

Germany Doomed. Military authorities, who three weeks ago were declaring that the German army was invincible, are now admitting that the German army is in a serious condition owing to its inability to sustain the present offensive.

It is pointed out that German casualties this year amount to 2,500,000 of which a million are permanent casualties.

Washington.—The first American army have captured dominating heights from the Germans northwest of Verdun and brought under the fire of its heavy guns the important railroad and Montmilly, Longuey and Conflans. General Pershing so reports in his Sunday evening communiqué.

TO PUNISH CRUELTY. London, Nov. 4.—Establishment of a Grand Court of Allied Nations is being discussed by the Allies in session today with their naval and military aids arranging all the details of the armistice and also peace terms which will be offered both Germany and Austria.

POLES AND LETS ARE FIGHTING EACH OTHER. Amsterdam, Nov. 4.—Dispatches from Warsaw state that a state of siege exists between Polish and Lithuanian forces and that fierce fighting has been going on for some weeks. The Polish troops, aided by German reinforcements have taken Lemberg, and an Austrian army under command of General Haus is marching to the aid of the attacking forces.

New Form of German Cruelty Takes Form in Retreat of Huns

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Amsterdam, Nov. 4.—Belgian and French refugees who crossed the Dutch frontier before it was closed during the last week, report that the latest form of German cruelty took form in the separation of men of military age from their families with slight delay. The land of deliverance they had been permitted to travel eastward with their wives and children until the last stage was reached and there they were detained. The men and women and children were allowed to proceed across the border.

Families arriving from around Valenciennes and Compiègne which leave no doubt that the Germans during the last four years of terror have systematically looted the country. Littered everywhere with furniture, curtains and household utensils, were stolen and ruthless fines were assessed on the people. Often they were imprisoned and then forced to respectfully salute the Germans.

Some of the parties of refugees were in good health while others have lost members by death

"TOO MUCH SYSTEM CURSE," SAYS PEER

Lord Northcliffe.

"The curse of most businesses is too much system." So says Lord Northcliffe, head of the largest newspaper business in England. Northcliffe made the remark in discussing the reconstruction and reorganization in commercial lines which will come in meeting competition after the war. He hits the theory that the head of a business should be as punctual at his office as his employees should be. The head should travel extensively, read and think, he believes.

PUPILS GET ANOTHER VACATION; NO STEAM

High School Students Dismissed This Morning After Waiting Till Ten O'clock For Heat. All Exposed To The Cold.

Who is to blame? That is the question that over five hundred high school students asked each other this morning, when upon arriving at school they found the building more like an ice house than a school room.

After three weeks of enforced illness and ample warning since last Thursday that the schools would be opened today, the heat was not forthcoming.

The students hovered in crowds in the main room in their winter wraps but no one seemed able to give an explanation of why the heat was not on. Five hundred high school students were exposed to the cold and many colds may result. After waiting until ten o'clock and not getting the least chance of heat the school was called to order and the students dismissed until this afternoon at one fifteen o'clock.

Coincident with the resuming of studies at St. Mary's school today, a new metal flag pole, forty feet high and a new American flag were dedicated with appropriate exercises on the school grounds.

Rev. Charles Olson, pastor of St. Mary's church gave a very interesting and instructive address to the children on the significance of the flag. While the flag was being raised by Joseph Junghut of Co. I, U. S. Infantry of Bagin Pass, Texas, the children sang the Star Spangled Banner.

NO SUNDAY SCHOOL MEET BECAUSE OF EPIDEMIC

The annual interdenominational convention of Sunday School Workers held in Beloit, November 12-14, has been postponed, on account of the epidemic, until June 11-13, at which time it will be held in Beloit. The Wisconsin Sunday School association, which conducts this convention, had a representative in Madison yesterday in consultation with the State board of health. Plans are already under way for the June convention.

NEW RULING RECEIVED BY SUGAR FACTORIES

Sugar factories throughout the country have just received a new order from the food administration, in regard to the sugar allotment which actual beet growers must receive. The ruling applies to all parties actually growing beets under contract with sugar companies in Wisconsin in the current year.

A call coming from box 31, located at the corner of South Main and Court streets, caused the department to take out all of their large equipment, including the hook and ladder, about seven-thirty o'clock Sunday evening.

At a hearing in the Chamber of Commerce, 25 businessmen told of increases in rates aggregating between 10 and 80 percent. Commissioner Jackson found that an increase in the minimum readiness to serve charge was responsible for many of the complaints. He promised that under the schedule would be made to remedy defects.

LARGE AMOUNT OF LAND GOING TO WASTE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 4.—There is at least 225,000 acres of good land now going to waste in Kentucky, according to a report submitted to H. P. Griffith, special agent of the Department of the Interior by the Louisville Board of Trade.

The land with which the report deals comprises only large tracts easily susceptible to reclamation. There are smallest 10,000 acres and the largest 75,000 acres.

The report is made in connection with preliminary plans of the Department of the Interior to place returning soldiers on the land on such terms that they can pay for the farms in small payments extending over a long period.

Negotiations for making the Kentucky tracts available for government purchase when Congress shall later have provided funds have gone far enough in only one case that the details can be divulged. It is in what is known as the Panther creek section of Kentucky. Here 50,000 acres in one tract can be reclaimed by the acre and by putting in drain tile it can be made ready for use.

According to Mr. Griffith, the tentative plans laid by the Department of the Interior contemplate placing returned soldiers on the soil in every state of the union and also using them as government employees after the armies are disbanded, making the land upon which they will go ready for occupancy. To make any of these plans effective Congress will have to enact the necessary legislation.

PEOPLE URGED TO RID STATES OF MALARIA

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 4.—Start a bat roost and you have a country of disease, is the admonition of Dr. Charles A. Campbell of San Antonio, who recently attended the Southwestern Medical Association meeting here.

According to his report, the worst enemies and the lowly bat as a combatant of the disease is highly valuable. Dr. Campbell has worked on his theory for seven years, and is feeling it scientifically only during the war.

"The malaria mosquito and the bat are both nocturnal and the mosquito furnishes 90 per cent of the 'bad food,' he said. 'All that is needed to combat the mosquito and resultant malaria is to furnish the bat with a home. A roost similar to the method in keeping bees in a back yard will suffice for the bat knows his home and will return after a night's foraging. In my back yard I have many of these sanitary workers.'

"The malaria question is a serious one in this country. More than $100,000,000 is lost annually as a direct result. In the United States there lies idle 79,000,000 acres of soil, fertile as the Nile, and an area sufficient to grow the American cotton crop, because of the malarial conditions prevailing. More than 2,000,000 ounces of quinine are annually imported to help eradicate malaria. If we take the proper step to eradicate malaria from our blood we will start with the mosquito. And the bat is the mosquito's worst enemy. Therefore a bat roost should be started as they are profitable."

TOUCH OF SEA IN "BOOK OF A THOUSAND SONGS"

25 Favorites of Last Generation in This Great Collection.

ALL PERMANENT GEMS

Sailors have always been singers. Oceans are the birthplace of a more than both on sea and land. There is something in the music of the waves which inspires the listener to other music.

Many of the songs which have survived, the favorites of the last generation, are sea songs. There are twenty-nine of these songs in "The Book of a Thousand Songs" which this paper is distributing.

"The All Love Jack"—remember the jolly, hitting air of Stephen Adams? Remember the other favorite, "Larboard Watch," or the famous "Wancy Leah"? Not to forget, of course, such truly sea songs as "Blow the Man Down," "Haul on the Bowline," "Barney Buntline" and the others.

They're all in The Book of a Thousand Songs, which contains sea songs, patriotic songs, children's songs, folk songs, hymns, operatic songs, home songs, sentimental songs, those which have survived and which are finding a permanent place in the heart of the world.

A coupon printed in another column of this paper explains how this song book may be obtained on extremely liberal terms thru this paper.

Semi Annual Meeting.

Application—The semi-annual meeting of the board of trustees of Lawrence college was held recently and three new trustees were elected. They are Henry Campbell of Milwaukee, Henry Campbell of Clinton, and William Larson of Green Bay. A committee was appointed to prepare a program for dedication services of the new chapel. J. G. Rosebush, Dr. Samuel Plank, and Dr. W. H. Weather, were chosen as members of a committee to consider plans for the introduction of courses which will be given to students in order to assist them in earning their own living at the completion of their college work.

Another feature was the contest between two K. P.'s, chewing on the ends of a string for a cigar.

The success of the evening is due to the hard work of Lieut. H. E. Dooley, Company Commander, personally supervising the arrangements of this successful affair, being assisted by Sergeants Irvin S. Clasen and Joseph Libowitz.

Special mention is due to Chiefs George Berger and Herbert Goede, well noted for their great skill in chicken dressings and salads.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married three years. I loved my husband at first and sacrificed all my own comforts in order to make it possible for him to change his business. He started out for himself and it took all the cash he could scrape together to swing his venture. I did not ask for one penny for myself and often went hungry to save just a little more.

One day when my husband was angry he told me that I looked like an old hag and that had he known how I had been going to deteriorate in appearance he would never have married me. This nearly broke my heart and made me decide to have some clothes. I had gone without long that when I asked for money he absolutely refused to give me any.

After that he was so unkind and I carried so much that I became very ill. A cousin of mine took me into her home and kept me until I regained my health and a little self-respect. I have been back with my husband for over a month and he is unchanged. He goes days without speaking to me and would never speak at all unless he thought of something cruel to say.

Please advise me. My cousin has told me of a position I can have where I will earn a fair salary but it will not go far if I have to pay for my board. I have been told to continue to live with my husband and make him furnish that, or shall I leave him and live on what I can earn?

SHIPWRECKED.

Accept the position. Money and appreciation for the good work you do will help you regain your self-respect rapidly. Consult a lawyer at once and see what he thinks your claims should be against your husband. Do not live with him any longer; thank you for his help, but see that he pays you alimony.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been keeping company with two young men. One of them was called into service several months ago and now he is in France. He did not want to marry until after the war, but he asked me to wait for him. He expected to be called soon. He wants me to marry him before he goes. I really do not love the last man as much as I do the first, although he is a very good man and respected by everybody. What shall I do? Shall I marry the last man for the protection of his name and the allowance I would receive for him, or shall I wait for the first young man?

WINFREED.

Wait for the man you love. The money you would receive through marriage will not be considered. If you are in need of money take a position in war work which will pay you well and at the same time help you to serve your country.

I was going with a boy from school whom my parents did not like. They didn't treat him cordially and so he stopped coming to see me. I cared more for him than I have for any other boy and I want him to come back. Both my mother and father are sorry now that they did a thing that would make me so unhappy. Would it be all right for me to invite another couple over and ask him to come, too?

P. S. B.

The boy evidently does not care very much about seeing you or he would arrange to see you. Do not invite him to come because it would be "running after" him. Probably you are idealizing him, which is a mistake. Look for a like quality in your other friends and you will be happier.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have two sons in the army and one in the navy. Will you kindly tell me whether both army and navy will have the same size boxes for Christmas gifts?

MRS. S. H.

The War Department has announced that American soldiers in France can receive but one Christmas package this year. It must not weigh more than three pounds and must be no more than nine inches by four by three. Men in the navy may be sent packages not to exceed twenty pounds.

HEALTH TALKS

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

THE DEATH OF DOCTORS

More and more letters from readers of this section refer to the absence of the family doctor in the service of the country. Is there a dearth of doctors?

According to the most recent reliable census there are 140,000 physicians in America serving 106,543,917 people, and of these physicians there are 75,498 under the age of 45 years. Oct. 2, 1918, there were 30,820 physicians in the United States army and navy, and since June 1 nearly 8,000 more have made application for commission in the Medical Corps of the U. S. Naval Reserve force. The Surgeon General of the U. S. Army has estimated that 40,000 physicians will be needed this year. That will mean that one of every five physicians in the country will be required to serve our fighting forces.

The authorities intend to use careful judgment to avoid stripping smaller villages or country districts of their necessary medical men. No community is going to suffer. In the larger towns and cities, where hospitals serve a considerable share of the population, fully half the doctors could well be spared for a few years without seriously inconveniencing anybody.

But nevertheless there is a grave danger. When good doctors are scarce, the kind of doctors the government has use for, when good doctors are difficult to find, then the uneducated pretenders, the unqualified healers, the quacks and the fakers have a richer field to work. The public has an easy going way of assuming that any healer who dares to hang out his shingle and bid for patronage is necessarily qualified under the law to practice the healing art, irrespective of the methods he employs. Alas, this is far from the truth. What the general public assumes the authorities have sanctioned, the authorities, as a matter of fact, care nothing about. Think it over. Can you recall a single instance of the authorities of their own volition prosecuting an unlicensed practitioner before they were driven to duty by some scandal or other?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Peanut Butter versus Cows.

Can you inform me if you think peanut butter is just as nutritious and fattening for growing children as cow's butter? (H. V. K.)

Answer—Peanut butter is a very wholesome, nutritious and economical food for children, but you stack it up against the most nutritious article of nutriment on the whole list of foods. Peanut butter gives about 2,605 calories per pound, and cow's butter gives 2,605 calories per pound. But, dollar for dollar, peanut butter has the cows' share of the lot these days. Animal fat, however, contains a vitamin essential for growth, and it is not certain that vegetable fat contains that vitamin, so either fresh milk or cow's butter should remain a reasonable share of the child's ration.

Anybody Need a Gizzard?

I see that you answer all questions pertaining to health. I would like to know where one can dispose of the lining of chicken gizzards, which I believe is used for medicinal purposes. (Mrs. F. S. L.)

Answer—This is news to me. Anybody wish to buy a gizzard?

Also Some Racilli for Sale.

Kindly let me know the origin of the culture used for pouring milk. Is it animal or vegetable? I had a table spoonful given me last October, and it is now a quart. I should like to sell some of it to responsible parties. (H. P. B.)

Answer—The lactic acid bacillus, naturally present in milk, ferments the sugar of milk into lactic acid, causing souring. Racilli are animal or vegetable, as you prefer. They are specialized micro-organisms and one may call them either or neither. Anybody could grow a quart from a tablespoonful in a week or two, so the starter has no special value.

THE LURE OF THE

to-be, of which the foundation had just been laid and the floor beams were at that moment going into place, I felt the queerest feeling tug at my heart and carry me back across the years.

Can you guess what it was?

An almost overwhelming desire to climb up the skeleton steps onto that foundation and walk across the floor beams.

A Great Adventure Begins

Do you remember when you were a child what a great adventure it was to have a new house go up in the neighborhood?

Do you remember how the joyous news flew about that some men were digging a foundation in the vacant lot around the corner and how all the children in the neighborhood immediately materialized on the spot in the magic way that a crowd appears after an accident on a street that a moment before seemed deserted?

Perchance our parents regretted that the new house would cut off a view or take away somebody's sunshine or make the neighborhood less open. We were not anxious about such distant evils; we saw in it only the vast possibilities of play and excitement.

The Delightful Danger

If I had to analyze the lure of the half-built house as a play ground, I should be unable to do it. I suppose the tang of danger in the skeleton stairs and the half-laid floor, was the largest factor. In our town there was another touch of romance to the half-built house—a fearful romance which always made mothers uneasy when new houses were being built in the neighborhood. For, once on a time in my childhood, three little children in the next town got shut up in a half built house in a little sink closet with a snap lock on it. The whole neighborhood was aroused by the frightened parents when the children did not come to tea, and hunted with lanterns all through the nearby wood and even got ready to drag the river. When someone found them in that little closet, it was too late for two of them. The one who lived was always a heroine among the other children. I remember once being invited to come over and play with a little girl whom she was to visit. I did not care greatly for my hostess but went with much the same spirit which makes it worthwhile for the vaudeville to list a Hattie Le Blanc or an Evelyn Thaw among its features. And alas I was doomed to disappointment, for the headliner failed to appear.

That Sad Moment When the Lock Was Put On

Exactly what we played in the half built houses on the long, glorious Saturdays, or in the littersweet shortness of the afternoon hour, I can not seem to remember. But the tardiness with which we answered the supper bell on such occasions, the regret with which we saw the front door hung and locked up, the feeling of being shut out of the finished house, are poignant memories. Sometimes—as on the day of which I speak—the sight of half finished house brings tears to me. And again if I pass a fragment pile of new-cut lumber, they are called up by that most potent memory summoner of all the senses.

If I could have just a few days in my childhood to live over again, one of them would surely be an autumn Saturday in a half-built house.

Cleans Woodwork—Mix one pint each of linseed oil, oil of turpentine and cider vinegar. Apply with a soft cloth. This cleans and polishes at the same time. If furniture is treated with this dressing it will look like new.

Housecleaning Hint—Keep a pole three or four yards long for carrying the large rugs in and out at cleaning time. By rolling rugs around pole they can be carried easily without bending or dragging in the dirt. Bamboo poles that come with new rugs are best.

Take any leftover Biscuit, buns or muffins, put in a paper bag like you would get at a grocery store and place in a warm oven for a few minutes; when warm serve. They are like fresh.

Twine Holder—A handy contrivance for the twine container, take a tin can (such as coffee comes in) and punch a hole in the bottom from which twine can come through nicely. Punch two holes opposite each other just near top, tie a piece of twine in these and hang up in a convenient place in the kitchen. Keep power on can so it will prevent twine from becoming soiled.

Save all wrapping twine and tie each piece to a large ball; surprising how much twine can be saved, as it, too, has risen in price.

For the Soldier Boy—Send your soldier boy a newspaper of his own. Make it by cutting bits of news from the daily papers which would interest him. Paste them on the thinnest kind of paper and thus he will have a little newspaper all his own. Funny pictures, jokes, and cartoons as well as snapshots from home will make it doubly interesting.

FOR THE CONVALESCENT.

Rhubarb Water—Wash one bunch of rhubarb; do not peel; cut in small pieces into a bowl; add sugar and boiling water; set away to cool; strain and serve cold.

Mutton Broth—Put one quart of cold water over one pound of chopped mutton and let stand until water is very red, then heat slowly and let stand ten minutes, strain and serve.

Grape Juice and Egg—Put two tablespoons of grape juice into a wine-glass and add a well beaten egg and chopped ice; if the juice is not sweet, add sugar.

Cream Toast—Two teaspoons cornstarch, one pint boiling milk, two teaspoons butter, whites of two eggs. Dissolve the cornstarch in a little cold milk. Pour the boiling milk slowly onto it, stirring till smooth, and cook till thoroughly done. Pour on the milk slowly, add salt. Flavor to taste and set in cups of water in the oven to cook till thick.

After the Thunderbolt.
Edgar's announcement fell on John Perrot like a thunderbolt. The sacrifice of all the savings had been in vain unless still greater sacrifices were forthcoming. The feverish dreams of early and rich reward through the completion of Edgar's invention were now nightmare visions of what would befall their without the protection of their eight bulletins—hair savings. The weaver's were stunned as though of thunderbolt had struck them from the sky instead of from Edgar's lips.

John was the first to speak. His face had turned red and stent.

"Well, it's gone. If you can raise any money elsewhere, Edgar, it's up to your conscience as to whether you put it into your invention or give it back to Edith and the children, where it belongs. But any money I can raise goes into the bank for them—and not the prospect of a million dollars for a cent of it will tempt me to give another dollar again for any one but them! I'm through."

Not a word more between him, Edith or Edgar on the subject for some days. Then he began to stay away from the house, visiting the neighbors particularly, as Edith observed, the Penses.

From one of these visits to the Penses he came home with a change in his manners, although he tried to hide it. Edith, sitting alone and depressed, in her sewing room one day, caught the sound of cheerful whistling from the cellar where she also heard Edgar hammering away, never weary at his boiler cylinder. Edgar's apparent callousness to the situation seemed the last straw that broke Edith's faith. She felt that unless she gave vent to her feelings in some way she would go shrieking mad.

Without changing her house slippers she ran out of the house and into Mrs. Penn's kitchen. There was such a sorrow-born sympathy in her neighbor's character that Edith craved the relief which even the mere pouring out of her troubles to Mrs. Penn's ear would bring. She had done it before. For by woman, however happily married, can do without the comfort of at least one understanding, sympathizing woman friend. For the feminine soul comprehends the feminine soul as no masculine one can do. In fact, women are often enemies because they understand one another so well!

Mrs. Penn turned from her bread making as Edith entered the kitchen, looked keenly at her, then wiping her hands quickly, she put her arms about Edith's waist and took her into the cool, half-darkened sitting room. She made her comfortable on the sofa and while Edith relieved her over-burdened nerves with a good cry, Martha Penn busied herself with the little attentions a loving and sympathetic woman knows how to bestow. "I knew. It has been awful—the temptation, the fear, the uncertainty."

Every night I tried to make up my mind one way or another, but I couldn't. I seemed to have lost hold. Oh—her white baby hands clutched at his doorman in helpless despair—"oh, what have you done—what have you done?"

"I was very brutal," he led her gently to an armchair far from the window and stood quietly beside her, his hand still holding hers, his eyes turned from the bowed head to the disordered table, as though seeking a memory. "Some men are born brutal—some become brutal through habit. Sylvia, I have seen life too long from my deliberately chosen standpoint of change. And then I meant there should be no illusions—either for you or me."

"I have none," she broke out bitterly; "they are all gone. I would not have come to you tonight if you had not made me see my own worthlessness."

"I knew that. You would have played on the safe side of the game and called it virtue."

"Paul, how cruel you are?"

"Yet—you love me, don't you?"

She looked up at him with veiled, wistful eyes.

"Yes—I believe I do. You are the one real thing left me—the one real thing of my whole life. I have been fed on illusions, my own and other people's. They thought because I was beautiful—more beautiful than most women—that I was also better, different. And I believed so, too. From our second meeting I knew that you had seen me—the real me—the foolish, selfish, vain, shallow child. And at first I was frightened, angry, fascinated against my will, and then—in tensely, unutterably grateful."

He bent over her and lifted her to her feet.

"You have been honest," he said, in a changed tone. "That is all I want. We wear masks—every one of us—and I mine. I am not absolutely a devil. It's hard to believe, I suppose, but there was a time when I was fond of—all sorts of unlikely things—flowers and music, and men and women—children." His hands released hers, and he walked restlessly to the table, where he stood a moment in silence, his back toward her, his head bowed.

"This is a miniature of my son," he said abruptly. She came softly across the room and took it from him. There was a moment in which they seemed to pass out of each other's consciousness. Then she looked up timidly. His head was still bowed, and the sharp-cut indomitable profile gave her no clue, no indication.

"He died?" she said almost in a whisper.

"No, it was I who died." He straightened up like a man shaking off a dream. "I am getting sentimental, Sylvia. You are young and very beautiful—and I am an old man who has murdered the best in him."

"I never think of you as old," she interrupted thoughtfully. "There is something about you—"

"What was that?"

She had broken off abruptly, her features white with panic. He lifted his head, but did not look at her.

"Did you hear anything?"

"Someone rode up—I heard the horse's hoofs—there is someone coming—now—"

Her voice was dry. Terror had stamped out all trace of beauty from her face. Destin crossed the room and held open a side door.

"Go in there!" he commanded quietly. "It is probably a message. In five minutes the man will have gone. Don't come in till I call you."

She obeyed unhesitatingly, and with one haunted glance over her shoulder, crept past him into the unlighted room. He closed the door and went back to his table. He was now perfectly calm. Someone knocked imperatively, and he answered the summons with tranquil indifference. As the door opened he glanced up, and the eyes of the two men met fixedly over the wavering candle-flame. It seemed to blot out everything but their faces.

Richard Farquhar saluted.

"I have come with a message from General Meunier."

"The message is urgent, then?"

"Yes. A spahi arrived this evening with news that the tribes are rising."

me onposts have been cut up. There is no communication between here and—"

"Give me the letter!"

With rapid, steady fingers Colonel Destin broke the seals and hurried over the half a dozen lines of precise writing. When he had finished the whole man had changed. The mask was in its place, so absolute in its disguise of energy and steely purpose that what had been before now seemed a grotesque incredible comedy.

"The first marches at midnight," he said, half to himself. "The orders were already given when you left?"

"Yes. Corporal Goetz's men were in campaign but five minutes after the signal."

"You were badly wounded. What are you doing in this business? You aren't fit to carry a rifle."

He saw the tightening of the dogged jaws, and for a moment there flashed between them a strange sympathy—the sympathy of fighters to whom fighting is the great essence of life. It passed like a streak of light in the darkness. Colonel Destin turned away.

"Give my compliments to General Meunier. I shall be with the regiment in ten minutes."

"This time there was no answer. The silence seemed to impress itself slowly on Colonel Destin's consciousness. He looked up over the top of the letter which he still held to the light and his gaze rested for a second on the little ivory fan and the white gloves—then passed upward, as though drawn by an irresistible fascination, to the face of the man opposite. He, too, had seen. A minute later their eyes met. In the distance a bugle sounded the Legion's war signal, "Aux armes! Aux armes!"

Richard Farquhar swung round and closed the door behind him. Instinctively Colonel Destin had placed himself between Farquhar and the door leading to the inner room. It was typical of him that he did not threaten or attempt to deny the vital facts of the situation. In an hour this man might be arrested and shot down—but not now. Richard Farquhar picked up the fan and opened it.

"Colonel Destin, a man I knew gave this to the woman he was to have married. How did it come here?"

Colonel Destin looked into the blazing eyes of his opponent and frowned. It was the first sign of yielding self-possession.

"You are brave. Courage is the one thing I can respect. You are free to go, Englishman."

"Not till you have answered."

"I shall then have double cause to order out a shooting party on your behalf."

"What you insinuate is a damnable lie."

Destin laughed.

"At least you have the courage of your convictions," he said, almost with regret.

The legionary made no answer. He had thrust aside the intervening table, and the next instant both men were locked together in a merciless embrace. There was no sound—scarcely a movement. The first fury of Farquhar's onslaught balanced his fever-weakened condition and leveled their respective strength to practical equality. Then the steely muscles of the elder man asserted themselves, and slowly, imperceptibly, he retreated from the door, seeming to yield, never for an instant relaxing his tenacious hold upon the other's arms. Suddenly he wrenched himself free and sprang back to his writing table.

"If you touch that door I shall shoot you down—now," he said quietly.

Farquhar turned, conscious that his own rage had suddenly burned out. He saw that the door which Destin had protected had opened, and that Sylvia Arnaud, white and large-eyed with terror, stood trembling on the threshold. Farquhar recoiled a step. Colonel Destin had replaced his revolver on the table. There was something akin to pity written on his hard face. Sylvia glanced at him and then at Farquhar. Behind her fear there had already begun to dawn the knowledge that the situation was dramatic and wholly in her hands.

"I knew that you were a traitor, Richard," she said. "But I thought you were still a gentleman. It seems I was mistaken." Her manner was terrific, childishly resentful.

He turned from her without answer. "I owe you an apology, Colonel Destin," he said simply. "Do you trust me enough to let me place myself under arrest?"

"I trust you enough to let you find your punishment under fire," was the courteous answer. "I shall need brave men."

"I thank you."

They saluted each other—gravely, with respect, as unreconciled duellists who have learned each other's worth in the bitterness of battle; then, with a slight bow to the woman, standing against the dark background of the inner room, Richard Farquhar passed out of the open window.

"Aux armes! aux armes!"

He laughed to himself, his teeth clenched. But the music of that storm signal was as the call of the blood, a challenge to the fighting spirit of his race. He swung himself lightly into the saddle and drove his heels against the horse's dripping flanks.

"En avant, Grane!" The animal swerved. Someone had caught at the bridle. Farquhar bent forward, peering into the darkness. "Who is it? My God—Gabrielle!"

"Yes; I thought I recognized you. Where have you come from?"

"Colonel Destin's—"

"Is—"

"Yes; she is there."

"Captain Arnaud is asking for her, and I suspected. There isn't a moment to be lost—"

"Faithful friend!" He caught her hand roughly from the bride. "There is something in all this I don't understand. Have I been mad—or dreaming?"

"Dreaming, Richard."

"Oh, I remember—the men who follow mirages die." That was the night when she came to give me 'God speed,' and it was for that man who came to me that night on the plateau—who saved me? Was it you?"

"Yes."

"And everything—all you said—was a lie, a charitable farce?"

"It was the truth."

"He did not speak for a moment. He bent lower in the saddle, as though to penetrate the twilight that hid her from him. And suddenly it was her hand that sought his and held it."

"I am sorry," she said. "I did not mean to hurt you."

"I have to thank you," he answered unevenly.

Then gently he freed himself and, pulling his horse round in the middle of the road, galloped back in the direction of the barracks.

Dinner Stories

He seated himself in the grill and made a protracted study of the menu. "Waiter," he said at length, "I have only $2 with me. What would you recommend?"

The waiter gently removed the card from the hand of the unsophisticated stranger as he replied,

"Another restaurant."

The great shortage of matches reminds us of this story. A widower had engraved on his wife's tombstone the words, "The light of my life has gone out."

A little later he married again, and one Sunday was standing with No. 2 before his first wife's grave.

Reading the above sentiment, the lady inquired in a rather huffed tone, "Is that so?"

"Yes," replied he, "but I've struck another match!"

Said the stranded railroad passenger—Who's that singing in there?

"Boy! That's the station master!"

"I got so little to do now, there ain't many trains stop here, so I'm settin' the time-table to music for the porters to learn when they come back from the war."

The part at the art gallery was being led around by the caretaker, who enlarged upon the beauties of every picture and statue at great length. At last the party paused opposite a statue of a lady who had lost both arms and most of her clothes.

"Alabaster, isn't it?" said one of the sightseers.

The caretaker looked at the questioner with withering scorn.

"No, Venus," he said.

That's been good as good can be. This is the little verse that Mrs. Bunny found on a pretty card at her plate one morning at breakfast. You see, Billy Bunny had received a lovely paint box for Xmas, and so he painted this little verse on a nice white card and put it by his mother's plate. And wasn't she glad to see that her little bunny boy wanted to be good? Well, I just guess she was, and she poured so much molasses carrot sympathy over his stewed lollypops that it took him fourteen minutes to lick the saucer!

Well, after that, the telephone rang and Uncle Lucky's voice said, "Hello! Is this Billy Bunny?"

And when the little rabbit said it was, Uncle Lucky said, "Happy New Year, 5000 short seconds to take you out in the Snowmobile! And of course, this tickled the little rabbit to pieces, for if there was anything he liked in this whole wide world it was riding with dear, kind Uncle Lucky in his sleekmobile."

And pretty soon, not so very long, the big sleighbell on the Snowmobile was ringing outside, and the little rabbit pulled on his brown fur overcoat and put on his mittens, and his knapsack, and his striped candy cane, and his earmuffs, and a few other things that I can't think of because I can't keep dear kind Uncle Lucky waiting any longer, and then away went the Sleighbell, with the two little rabbits snuggling like three Cheshire cats.

Well, after they had gone for a mile or three, they came to a little log cabin in the woods where lived an old deer named Mr. Buck. And he had antlers, which are deer horns—you know—the higher as the branches on a tree, but his legs were stiff and rheumatic, for he had the gout and couldn't run through the snow very well.

So kind Uncle Lucky got out of the Sleighbell, pulled on the door and pretty soon Mr. Buck hobbled across the room and lifted the big wooden latch. And then he said, "Come in, Mr. Lucky! Left-hand foot. Happy New Year and two or three more."

So Uncle Lucky went inside, but first he told the little rabbit to cover up the Snowmobile with the bear rug so it would not get a stiff neck, and after that he told him to come in, too, for Mr. Buck might have some little sweet cakes, for all he knew.

And when this was done the little rabbit went inside and, sure enough, Mr. Buck had gotten out some little sweet cakes and a box of cigars and a picture book, so that Uncle Lucky and Billy Bunny had a lovely time until, all of a sudden—at that time another story, as Mr. Kipling says, so you will have to wait until tomorrow to hear what happened after that.

When Itching Stops

There is one safe, dependable treatment that relieves itching torture and skin irritation almost instantly and that cleanses and soothes the skin.

Ask any druggist for a 35c or $1 bottle of zemo and apply it as directed. Soon you will find that irritations, pimples, rashes, eczema, blotches, ringworm and similar skin troubles will disappear.

A little zemo, the penetrating, satisfying liquid, is all that is needed, for it banishes most skin eruptions, makes the skin soft, smooth and healthy.

Use Resinol

first for skin troubles

Delay in the proper treatment of skin troubles is dangerous. Every day spent in trying unproved remedies may only let the disorder spread and become more and more deeply seated.

The value of Resinol Ointment is known. For over twenty years it has been used as a soothing, healing remedy for the skin.

If applied in time, it usually checks the itching and reduces the eruption right away. But even in stubborn, long-standing cases, it is surprising, how quickly this gentle, yet effective ointment brings results.

All druggists sell Resinol Ointment. Men with tender faces find the pink lotions of Resinol Shaving Stick delightful looking.

Sport Snap Shots
—MORRIS MILLER—

The past season has been a banner one in the trapshooting sport. Notable among the achievements of the year's work was the staging of state championship tournaments in forty states for the professional title. For several seasons previous to 1917 there existed a tendency to eliminate the old style of professional shot. He appeared at all tournaments, but only in special events. But the trigger pullers decided that the professional was bound to be a fixture and the associations are now on a fair road toward making the professional matches worth while. As said above, forty state professional tournaments were held. Here is the list of champions, their home towns and the scores based on 100 birds:

Following is a list of the professional trapshooting champions of 1918 and their scores.

Out of the forty winners only four fell below 90 birds. Only one of them fell below 80. Two men, Lewis of Illinois and Hawkins of Pennsylvania, made perfect scores. So far so good.

Now the next natural step is to be made by the gunners is to arrange next year for a national shoot for professionals, permitting only winners of state tournaments to enter. This would not only bring the best pro shots in the country together, but it would determine the true champion. Heretofore there have been good shots—many of the stars of the country—

NOTICE OF GENERAL ELECTION

Office of County Clerk, Oct. 25, 1918.

To the Electors of Rock County:

Notice is hereby given that a general election is to be held in the several towns, wards, villages, and election precincts in the county of Rock, on the 5th day of November, 1918, at which the officers named below are to be chosen. The names of the candidates for each office to be voted for, whose nominations have been certified to or filed in this office, are given under the title of the office and under the appropriate party or other designation, each in its proper column, together with the question submitted to a vote, in the sample ballot below.

INFORMATION TO VOTERS:

- The following instructions are given for the information and guidance of voters:
- (a) A voter upon entering the polling place and giving his name and address, will receive a ballot from the ballot clerk which must have endorsed thereon the names or initials of both ballot clerks, and no other ballot can be used. Upon receiving his ballot, the voter must retire alone to a booth or compartment and prepare the same for voting. A ballot clerk may inform the voter as to the proper manner of marking a ballot, but he must not advise or indicate in any manner whom to vote for.
- (b) If a voter wishes to vote for all the candidates nominated by any party he shall make a cross or other mark under the party designation printed at the top of the ballot in the circle made for that purpose. A ballot so marked and having no other mark will be counted for all the candidates of that party in the column underneath, unless the names of some of the candidates of the party have been erased or a name shall be written in or a cross mark be placed in the square at the right of the name or names of candidates in another column. If the voter does not wish to vote for all the candidates nominated by one party, he shall mark his ballot by making a cross or mark in the square at the right of the name of the candidate for whom he intends to vote, or by inserting or writing in the name of the candidate.
- (c) A voter may vote for an entire group of candidates for presidential electors by marking a cross (X) or mark in the circle (O) under the party designation at the head of the party column, or he may vote for the candidates for presidential electors by making a cross (X) or mark in the square at the right of the name of each candidate for whom he wishes to vote. If a voter does not wish to vote for any one or more candidates for presidential electors in the group he may erase the name of such candidate or candidates and may write in the name of the person or persons for whom he desires to vote, and the cross (X) or mark in the circle (O) at the head of the party column shall count as a vote for each of the candidates in such column. If a voter does not wish to vote for any candidates for president or vice-president or for any presidential electors, whose names appear upon the ballot, he may insert or write in the names of the candidates for president and vice-president, and presidential electors to a number equal to the number of electors to be elected, in the appropriate spaces in the blank column at the right of the ballot.
- (d) A voter may vote upon a question submitted to a vote of the people by making a cross (X) or mark in the square at the right of the answer which he intends to give.
- (e) The ballot should not be marked in any other manner. If the ballot be spoiled, it must be returned to the ballot clerk, who must issue another in its stead, but not more than three. A copy shall be issued to any one voter. Five minutes' time is allowed in booth to mark ballot. Unofficial ballots or memorandum to assist the voter can be taken into the booth, and may be used to copy from. The ballot must not be shown so that any person can see how it has been marked by the voter.
- (f) After it is marked it should be folded so that the inside cannot be seen, but so that the printed indorsements and signatures of the ballot clerks on the outside may be seen. Then the voter should pass out of the booth or compartment, give his name to the inspector in charge of the ballot box, hand him his ballot to be placed in the box, and pass out of the voting place.
- (g) A voter, who declares to the presiding officer that he is unable to read, or that by reason of physical disability, he is unable to mark his ballot, can have assistance of one or two election officers in marking same, to be chosen by the voter; and if he declares that he is totally blind, he may be assisted by any person chosen by him from among the legal voters of the county. The presiding officer may administer an oath in his discretion, as to such person's disability.
- (h) The following is a facsimile of the official ballot.
